

The Role of Christian Values in the Workplace

In one's workplace there are often situations that require decisions to be made. In order to make correct decisions people weigh various factors, one of which is their Christian values and beliefs. The essential question is how much should these values influence the decision. Ideally they should have a great significance. Only by giving our Christian values priority over other factors will people become truly successful.

Although it may be difficult to live by Christian values at times, it these values which can bring a true fulfillment to a career. One example is a person's work ethic. An loyal employee that works hard at what they do is going to feel more satisfied than one who does as little work as possible and fake being sick to avoid work. It is very easy to get caught up in the money and power a job may bring, but it is this money and power that can corrupt individuals to acts they normally wouldn't consider. That is why in a workplace environment it is especially important to consider your values.

In today's world we are pushed by society to focus are lives on our job. Everyday more and more children our put into daycare facilities and people become workaholics. One's job is important and should be done with pride and vigor, but things like leisure, lifelong learning, and family should also be considered. It is therefor necessary to use our Christian values to help us prioritize aspects of our lives.

The bottom line is having a good foundation of Christian values, which have a significant influence in the workplace, will inevitably bring success and satisfaction.

Although some people do not realize it, living by a set of ideals is the best way to live a fulfilling, happy life.
