

Greetings poets and poetry lovers. The Spring/Summer 2017 issue of Oklahoma Humanities magazine will focus on all things “Poetry.” We’re reserving a section for local poets’ verse on the topic of “spring” or “renewal.” I would appreciate your forwarding this notice to colleagues and fellow poets. I look forward to reading your work. ~ Carla Walker, Editor

Carla D. Walker
Editor, Oklahoma Humanities Magazine
Oklahoma Humanities Council
428 W. California, Ste. 270
Oklahoma City, OK 73102
(405) 235-0280 | Fax (405) 235-0289
carla@okhumanities.org

Submit the following by June 17, 2016:

Up to 3 short poems that reflect the theme of “spring” or “renewal”

Bio or CV, including education and past publications

Your contact info: mailing address, telephone, and email address

Email submissions only—faxes and U.S. mail are not accepted. Oklahoma Humanities is not responsible for hard copies or originals.

If accepted, you will be notified via email by July 1, 2016.

Audience: Adult general audience

Compensation: 2 copies of print issue

Contact: Carla Walker, Editor • carla@okhumanities.org

About our publication: Each issue of Oklahoma Humanities magazine addresses a particular theme, using the humanities: to contemplate questions and concerns of the human experience; to understand other cultures and our place in the world; and to inspire new perspectives and participation in civic life. The publication is distributed free of charge as public programming. Consequently, authors, artists, and archives contribute content as a charitable endeavor to foster lifelong education.

Circulation: Print readership is approximately 11,500 statewide [donors, universities, public schools, public and prison libraries, veterans’ centers, cultural organizations, state and national legislators, etc.] with additional distribution via events, bookstores, etc. View it online:

www.okhumanities.org/publications [current issue]

www.okhumanities.org/archives [archives]

Previous authors have included: Brian Doyle, Martin Marten; Cynthia Barnett, Blue Revolution; Ibtisam Barakat, Tasting the Sky; Jay Winter, Cambridge History of the First World War; Anita Hill, Reimagining Equality; Naomi Benaron, Running the Rift; Michael Sandel, What Money Can't Buy; Mickey Edwards, The Parties Versus the People; and Krista Tippett, host of NPR's "On Being."

Oklahoma Humanities Council • 428 W. California Avenue, Ste. 270 • Oklahoma City, OK 73102 •

(405) 235-0280

About the Oklahoma Humanities Council

The Oklahoma Humanities Council (OHC) strengthens communities by helping Oklahomans learn about the human experience, understand new perspectives, and participate knowledgeably in civic life. The humanities—disciplines such as history, literature, film studies, ethics, and philosophy—offer a deeper understanding of ourselves and others by confronting us with the questions, values, and meanings of the human experience. As the nonprofit, state partner for the National Endowment for the Humanities, OHC brings people together to explore these ideas through programming and community grants that support book groups, exhibits, film festivals, teacher institutes, and more. OHC engages people in their own communities, providing forums for education, critical thinking, and productive civil discourse.