

SERMON FOR MORNING PRAYER
ROGATION TUESDAY

The Rev. Warren E. Shaw, Priest Associate

The First Lesson: Here beginneth the tenth Verse of the eleventh Chapter of the Fifth Book of Moses, called Deuteronomy.<sup>2</sup>

“For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven: A land which the LORD thy God careth for: the eyes of the LORD thy God are always upon it, from the beginning of the year even unto the end of the year.

“And it shall come to pass, if ye shall hearken diligently unto my commandments which I command you this day, to love the LORD your God, and to serve him with all your heart and with all your soul, That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil. And I will send grass in thy fields for thy cattle, that thou mayest eat and be full. Take heed to yourselves, that your heart be not deceived, and ye turn aside, and serve other gods, and worship them; And then the LORD’s wrath be kindled against you, and he shut up the heaven, that there be no rain, and that the land yield not her fruit; and lest ye perish quickly from off the good land which the LORD giveth you.”

Here endeth the First Lesson.

The Second Lesson: Here beginneth the twenty-fourth Verse of the sixth Chapter of the Gospel According to St. Matthew.<sup>3</sup>

“No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment? Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they? Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature? And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.”

Here endeth the Second Lesson.

Text:

From the Second Lesson: “Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you.”<sup>4</sup>
In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

Homily:

The Second Lesson today confronts us with a choice. Will it be God? Or will it be mammon? It can't be both.

<sup>1</sup> Psalms and Lessons for the Christian Year (1943), THE BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER xxiv (PECUSA 1928, rev. 1943).

In this passage from the Sermon on the Mount, our Lord tells us not to worry. He tells us specifically not to worry about three things that are rather important. Do not worry about food. Do not worry about clothing. Do not worry about tomorrow.

We do need to think about those things because we have to make plans and we have to make decisions. But thinking is one thing; worrying is something else. The difference, I think, is the context in which we make those plans and those decisions.

I would like to suggest to you this morning that anxiety grows out of being drawn in two directions at once. We get anxious when we are undecided about which direction to take, which choice to make, or which objective to pursue. Where should we invest our money and our time and our energy? Whose friendship should we cultivate and whose company should we keep? How should we react when people ignore us, or insult us, or betray us? We are confronted every day by a host of such decisions, and we are going to agonize over every one of them until we make a fundamental decision and a fundamental commitment about the overall direction of our life and whether we are going to serve God or serve mammon.

Jesus says, “Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you.” Make the big decision. Commit yourself to the service of God and the pursuit of His values and purposes for the world, and then the little decisions will follow.

Because God has endowed all of us with free will, you do have an alternative. Instead of committing yourself to God’s will and purposes, you can choose instead to devote your life to the pursuit of worldly goods and worldly values. Either way you choose, you still have to think about how you are going to feed and cloth yourself and your family. Either way, you still have to think about how to prepare for whatever tomorrow may bring. But since the master you choose to serve becomes responsible for your welfare, the question resolves itself to a matter of trust. In whom do you put your trust? Do you choose to entrust your welfare to God or to the wealth of this world? Which will it be?

I find it ironic that the words “In God we trust” appear on our money. They may not appear there much longer because the ACLU is determined to have them removed. But it almost seems as though the founding fathers intended to warn us that we could not really trust our money. If you are paying attention to what has been happening to the dollar on the international market, it appears that the founding fathers were giving good advice. God is always faithful. God always delivers on His promises, and He always takes care of those who trust in Him. The same cannot be said for our money.

I have to say here that mammon is not evil. Mammon is not even a person. Mammon is simply an Aramaic word that means riches or wealth. Mammon is a gift of God. As such it has a proper place in the order of things and should be used, like all of God’s gifts, in accordance with the will and intentions of God. Mammon can be used, and should be used, to build relationships -- relationships that endure in this world and the next. Jesus himself said, “Make friends for yourselves by means of unrighteous mammon, so that when it fails, they [those friends you have made with your wealth] may receive you into the eternal habitations.”

By calling mammon “unrighteous”, Jesus does not mean that it is evil. It is simply not righteous. It has no morality in itself. The evil comes in when it is not properly used or when relationships are sacrificed in order to attain it.

The definition of idolatry is to put what God has created in the place of God Himself, and it is the most the most commonly mentioned sin and the most severely condemned sin in the Bible. The first of the Ten Commandments is “Thou shalt have no other Gods before me.” St. Paul talks about the foolishness of men who worship and serve the creature rather than the creator, and since God is the Creator of all material things, whoever chooses to serve mammon rather than God is a fool and an idolater.

“No man can serve two masters”, says Jesus. We all have to make a choice. You cannot serve both God and mammon. One of them has to give way to the other, and whichever one you choose will determine the context in which you will make all the little decisions that we all have to make every day.

You will always be anxious until you make the fundamental decision about how to invest your life. Until you make that critical decision you will always be torn in two directions. You will be like someone trying to ride two horses at once, or trying to chase two rabbits running in different directions. You will have to struggle with every little decision about where to invest or spend your money, where to invest or spend your time and your energy, whose friendship to cultivate and whose company to keep, how to react when people ignore you, or insult you, or betray you. How to prioritize and respond to all the demands and requests for your time, your energy, and your resources.

All those little decisions are made in the context of the one big decision that gives them their ultimate meaning. Who stands in the place of God? A creature or the Creator? In whom do you put your trust?

“You cannot serve God and mammon.” Open your wallet and read what your money itself says. “Seek first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things will be added to you.”
