MPP SAYS MEDICAL RECORD LAWS NEED TO CHANGE
An Ontario Liberal backbencher wants to clarify the laws regarding personal medical records and stop doctors from charging patients for access to their own files.
Former health minister David Caplan says he wants the law to state that personal health information in the custody or control of a health professional belongs to patients.
Caplan says some people are being charged fees to access their medical files after their family doctor retires.
He says patients who wanted to take their records to a new doctor were charged "an enormous fee" to get their files.
Caplan will introduce a private member's bill to ban any fees associated with getting your health records, and require informed consent about the specific way your personal data is to be used.
The bill would also mandate proper security encryption of electronic medical records, which Caplan says is clearly needed after two recent cases of memory sticks full of medical records being lost.
