

All Alone (Track 4 on Twenty Two Years)

I used to be just like you are
I had a vision and a semi-old-new car
And I don't think that I ever thought that hard
I don't think that I ever thought we'd end up like we are

Fade away to a dog day afternoon
You remember we were old enough to know
About the things that we needed to survive
I believe that if we hadn't hesitated

I wouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get through it all somehow
I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow

I think about you from time to time
And I'm not saying that you're always on my mind
Or that I owe my circumstances all to you
It's clear I'm here because of you but I don't blame you now

Fade away to a sunny disposition
I always thought that you were on a crazy mission
Now I know that you never meant the pain
The love we shared together then is all that still remains

I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow
I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow

Changes seem to come and go inside though it always feels the same
But when we get behind closed doors, I always yearn for something more
There's something still that's missing it's your smile that I'm remembering

The years have been so kind to you
I hear you're married and you have some children too
Still I think that it seems so damn absurd
The only time we get in touch is sending Christmas cards

I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow
I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow
I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow
I shouldn't be all alone right now, I thought that we could get it through all somehow

Written, produced, and recorded by John Spreier. Acoustic guitars, bass guitar, electric guitar, and vocals by John Spreier. Drums by John Guadagni.

© Copyright 2000-2002 Barnyard Sounds. All rights reserved.