

On the 200th anniversary of the abolition of the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade in territories under British control

Even today, there are structures that stand as silent witnesses of the barbaric Trans-Atlantic slave trade on the coasts of Africa. Their dungeons warehoused many Africans who were captured and then transported to America. Cape Coast Castle (in Ghana), as one of those portals of no return, speaks the unspeakable.

Photo: Courtesy of Rebecca Shumway. 2001