

The Promised Definition of Friendship

27 March 2005

quoted from {HRI 20050327-V2.4.1}

You probably know the feeling of friendship quite well.

You feel the truth about someone, and friendship follows:
You discover, what you can and want to give to someone,
and you try to give that, and you expect from another that he or she feels the truth about you,
and (that he or she) also acts upon that.

So we can define it:
Friendship is feeling the truth about someone and discovering as a result,
what you can and want to give to someone
(and to many, as you can have many friendships)
and to try to give that,
and
also expecting from another (and from many) to feel the truth about you, and that he or she also acts upon that.

Koos Nolst Trenité "Cause Trinity" — human rights philosopher and poet

'Men of all nations came to listen to Solomon's wisdom, sent by all the kings of the world, who had heard of his wisdom.'
1 Kings 4:34

Copyright 2005 by Koos Nolst Trenité - human rights philosopher and poet <http://www.angelfire.com/space/platoworld> platoworld@lycos.com

This is 'learnware' - it may not be altered, and it is free for anyone who learns from it, and (even if he can not learn from it) who passes it on unaltered, and with this message included, to others who might be able to learn from it. None of my writings may be used, ever, to support any political or religious or scientific agenda, but only to educate, and to encourage people to judge un-dominated and for themselves, about any organizations or individuals. [Printout-20070330-1]