History

John Walker's brother, Mike, was killed in action during the Vietnam War. This greatly affected Walker, who wanted to be a hero like his brother. After leaving the military, Johnny heard about the Power Broker, a mystery man who claimed that he could give people superhuman strength. Walker and a friend took the treatment and gained increased strength.

Walker downed a costume and called himself the Super-Patriot. He claimed that Captain America was out of touch with modern America. A little later, Captain America confronted Walker, who challenged him to a contest of might. Captain America refused Walker but warned him that he would catch him if he did anything illegal.

Sometime after that, Steve Rogers resigned as Captain America due to pressure from the federal Commission of Superhuman Activities. The Commission then asked Super-Patriot to become the sixth man to wear the Captain America costume.

In actuality, the chairman of the Commission was an agent for the Red Skull. This situation led to a government scandal wherein the truth was revealed as to the Commission's sinister agenda. Walker and Rogers made their report to the Commission, who asked Rogers to become Captain America again. Walker gained a new identity, USAgent.

Since then, Walker joined the Avengers. He later had a very successful solo career before ending up leading a task force called Maximum Security.
