

Without Religious Leaders

Every religion needs someone to carry on the sacred practices. For Catholics, these people are the priests, brothers, and nuns. They have the authority and ability to carry out the traditional and sacred practices such as the Liturgy, the Holy Sacraments, and other religious services. They are a necessity to our religious community. Without them, none of the services of the faith would be carried out.

The priests, brothers, and the nuns are the ones who carry out the works of God and preach his words. They explain and help us to understand God's word, guiding us through our spiritual journey. They explain the Gospels and the Scriptures to us and tell us how to live our life as God would want us to live. We gain the knowledge and wisdom into God's plan and deeds through them. Without them, we would be left ignorant and misled.

Without any priests, religious brothers, or nuns, no one would be spreading the Word of God. The religion would not be practiced and the Liturgy and the Sacraments would not be celebrated without them to lead us. They are the center of our community. Without their guidance, we would not come to know God and follow him. We may fall into deep sin. But with their teaching and guidance, we strive to be good. We come to know God and follow him. We become better followers of Christ.

The priests, brothers, and nuns are indeed necessary to our community. Without them, the religion and the community would stop functioning, since none of the practices would be carried out. The religion would eventually die out and God would be forgotten. The priests, religious brothers, and nuns are here to prevent these horrible events from happening. They are here to lead us, guide us, counsel us, teach us, and help us on our journey toward God. They are the ones who carry on the sacred practices.
