

St. Joseph School Memories

My memories of St. Joe are when I was in kindergarten, I loved to play with all the toys. I thought they were so cool. We played with transformers and Star Wars toys. It was fun. In second grade, I remember we made apple butter. It tasted and smelled good. In third grade we would bring stuff from home and put it in a special suitcase that we had in the classroom. In fourth grade, I remember drawing the tree outside the church for science class. In fifth grade, we had a bookshelf with a lot of books. I read a lot of them. One of the books was Totally Haunted Kids. It was a cool book. In seventh grade, I remember Mrs. Rogers moved up from sixth grade to seventh grade. I also remember her telling us that the World Trade Center had been hit. My memories of eighth grade are when we had our Confirmation and our Confirmation retreat. Those two memories were big. I remember our field trips in eighth grade like the Cardinal's game and the Jefferson City trip. These are my memories of St. Joe.
